PREFACE

PREFACE

In presenting this 52d volume of the Lineage Book we have reached a new epoch in the making of history.

Hitherto we have furnished record and memorial of the men and women of the American Revolution who played well their part in that great and decisive drama and we are proud to place their names in our treasured archives, where each succeeding list of names and dates of deeds become additional chronological record affording invaluable aid in research for both preceding and succeeding periods.

We pledge ourselves to perpetuate the memory and spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence.

But did we not hope to do more? Did we not hope that our ancestors might live in us again? That in the battle of life we might be given courage like unto theirs, faith to equal theirs, and strength to overcome every conflict against sin and to achieve victory in every effort for the betterment of mankind? We have chanted the praises of our forefathers, so if we play well our part on the stage of life, coming generations will chant our praises and those of our children and childrens' children and say: "The sons and daughters were worthy of their fathers and mothers." Aye, more, this has come to pass in our day and generation, for on many blood-stained fields in Flanders and France lie some of the fairest, the brightest, the best, the noblest sons of America, who gave their lives willingly for the freedom of the world.
